

1985 SUMMER SEASON PROGRAMME

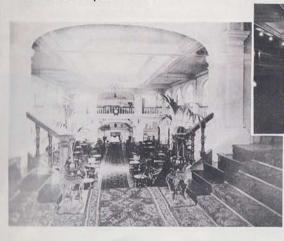

June Brown

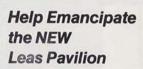

Very best wishes for your 1985 season. I am sorry I could not be with you on this occasion. I look forward to seeing you all again very soon. From June Brown and her agents, Sarah Band Associates. Tel: 01 359 5136

The Leas Pavilion Theatre

Originally built as a splendid Edwardian Tea Room for high class refreshments and dancing, the Leas Pavilion has been the home of live theatre in Folkestone since 1928. The tradition of repertory which was founded by James Grant Anderson has lasted in unbroken continuity for 57 years. This is a repertory record unequalled anywhere in the world. From 1929 - 1969 the halcyon days of the Leas Pavilion were under the aegis of Arthur Brough and his wife Elizabeth Addyman for an astonishing fortyone years. In the seventies that heritage was carried on by the late Richard Burnett of the Penguin Players and subsequently by Robert Howard and his family. Since 1976, Charles Vance has been the artistic director of the Leas Pavilion which for several years now has been run by a Theatre Charity Trust. Many distinguished careers in Theatre began at the Leas Pavilion. The Hall of Fame includes: Michael Aldridge, Peter Barkworth, Jill Bennett, Joan Hickson, Noel Howlett, David Tomlinson and Peter Walter. Times change and the Arts nationally are under pressure to survive. Rising costs and lower grant aid are affecting every corner of culture. Live Theatre is essential to our social structure. It must meet the challenge of the 80's. For 1985 and onwards, Folkestone's own Theatre the NEW Loas Pavilion, will continue to provide culture in new ways, ever changing to meet the needs of our public.

THE GLASS MENAGERIE

by Tennessee Williams

The play directed by Charles Vance in association with Imogen Moyniham Settings designed by Michael Pollard Lighting designed by James McKee

Director's Note: Set in a run-down section of the Mid-Western City of St. Louis to-day and in the early thirties, "The Glass Menagerie" is only incidentally a "Southern" piece-as in Mrs. Wingfield's nostalgia for her youth in the Delta. Nor is it a pastiche of the thirties. It is primarily a play of the frustration of youth, and as such it is stateless and timeless.

Original Music composed by Paul Bowles
Music, Sound effects and editing by Jack Bryant & Charles Vance

Time: The Present and the early 1930's Place: An Alley in St. Louis Part 1
Preparation for a Gentleman Caller Part 2
The Gentleman Calls

This Leas Pavilion Theatre gratefully acknowledges the kind assistance of the following firms and individuals who loaned properties and furniture for the production of the GLASS MENAGERIE: Grand Hotel for the gramophone, M.P. Glasspole for chairs and mirror, Oclees for andelabra, Eureka for dustbin, Lindy Lou for kit bag, British Telecom for 'phone, The Lighting Boutique for 'light fittings, and everyone who so kindly gave their assistance on this production.

ABOUT THE PLAY

In writing The Glass Menagerie', Tennessee Williams went some way towards exorcising the traumas of his tempestuous and wretched childhood, although the repercussions of his upbringing were to haunt him for the whole of his life. He was born at Columbus, Mississippi in 1911 and the play is largely auto-biographical, reflecting the strains and stresses of his family life. His mother, Edwina Dakin, was the beautiful daughter of an Episcopal Vicar. In 1907, this refined young woman married Cornelious Coffin "CC" Williams and later that year gave birth to a daughter, Rose. It was, however, an impossible marriage and within two years she was back at the Vicarage with "CC" visiting a few days a month. And so life went on until in 1918, the whole family moved to St. Louis. This was the first time that "CC" had co-habited with his young family and the following year a third child, Dakin, was born. But their changed circumstances brought no happiness to any of them. Edwina could not reconcile herself either to the straitened circumstances she found herself in, nor to her husband's excesses and retreated into a 'Daydream of Southern gentility'. Eventually in the 1950's, she had a nervous breakdown. The children, if anything, caught between their mother's excessive prudery and their father's indifference and drunken brutality, fared worse and were never able to successfully adapt to life.

In Tennessee's case, however, his writing provided an escape from the harsh actuality of his existence but his sister Rose to whom he was very close, re-acted by gradually withdrawing from reality into a world of her own and eventual madness. She was lobotomised in 1937. Tennessee never got over the guilt he felt at having survived the ordeal of his childhood relatively intact while his beloved sister, "the best of us all", had been destroyed by her experiences.

From 1921-31, Tennessee attended the University of Missouri where he became involved in playwriting, but it was not until 1943 while broke, exhausted and depressed trying to eke out a living in New York that he wrote 'The Glass Menagerie' (originally, 'The Gentleman Caller'). In 1945 the play was a sensational success on Broadway and followed by 'A Streetcar Named Desire' ensured that by the time he was 40 he was 'the richest and most famous playwright in America'

'The Glass Menagerie' was first seen on the London stage in 1948, directed by John Guilgud.

THE DIRECTOR

In 1985 Charles Vance celebrates 25 years as Actor/Manager. He has written and directed Pantomimes, presented Reperatory seasons in major theatres throughout the country and launched many positional tours, ranging from STOP THE WORLD I WANTTO GET OFF to Terrence Rattigan's IN PRAISE OF LOVE and his current national tour of the West End Musical MR CINDERS. In 1976 he moved to the Leas Pavilion Theatre in Folkestone of which he is still Artistic Director. His numerous acting credits include Sir Thomas More in A MAN FOR ALL SEASONS, Archie Rice in THE ENTERTAINER and Maxim de Winter in REBECCA. Prominent in the world of theatre politics, he currently serves as Chairman of the Government's Standing Advisory Committee on Local Authority and the Theatre and Vice-Chairman of the Theatres Advisory Council. He was, for several years on many other theatre governing bodies. In the field of light entertainment, he appears regularly in the role of Chairman in Victorian Music Hall and recently revived his JOLSON REVUE which toured the U.K. and Australia.

CAST

MIRANDA MARSHALL

After training at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama, Miranda Marshall began her career with the Abbey Players in a London season of plays. She has toured extensively, both here and abroad, enjoying success in theatre and TV in Norway. After working with many repertory companies, in particular for several years with the Arena Theatre in Birmingham, she did a long stint in television in classics such as Dixon of Dock Green, Emergency Ward 10, Z Cars, Play for Today etc., and viewers will have heard her voice on numerous TV commercials. In recent years she has worked mostly in the West End, appearing in Cat Among The Pigeons, Birds of Paradise, Cause Celebre and a very long run in No Sex Please, We're British. She has just completed a nationwide tour with Trevor Bannister, in Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed.

WYN JONES

WYN JONES made his first professional appearance at the age of 13 in Goodbye Mr Chips, playing six generations of schoolboys and, while still at school, appeared in several plays for the B.B.C. He studied drama at University and his early repertory experience was at Torquay, Swansea and Westcliff, since when he has appeared in many theatres around the country. His appearances include roles in A Streetcar Named Desire, Hamlet, Habeas Corpus and A Voyage Round My Father and he was with The Moustrap at the St Martin's Theatre in London. He recently played Stafford T Wilkins in the national tour of Alan Ayckboum's Sisterly Feelings. His most recent television appearance was in the Channel 4 film Owain, Prince of Wales. Wyn was a member of the 1981 and 1984 companies at the Leas Pavillon Theatre when his appearances included Relatively Speaking, Stage Struck, Table Manners, A Taste of Honey and The Man. Last season, he also directed Don't Start Without Me, Out of the Crocodile and California Suite.

MICHAEL BOTT

MICHAEL was born in the Isle of Man and grew up near Banbury in Oxfordshire. On leaving school, he moved to London where he attended the Rose Bruford College of Speech and Drama, after which he gained his first professional experience in Jack Watling's Summer Theatre at Frinton, making his first appearance playing Arthur in 'Spring and Port Wine'.

Since then, Michael has worked extensively in theatre, having worked at Colchester, East Grinstead, Malvern, Edinburgh, Birmingham, Newcastle, The Piccadilly and comedy theatres in London and also in various fringe theatre productions. He has appeared on television in an episode of 'Bergerac', 'London is Drowning', a B.B.C. 'Play for Today', and has made numerous T.V. commercials. His more recent appearances include Gordon in 'Dangerous Corner' at Vienna's English Theatre and last year he found great success playing Mortimer in The Taunton Brewhouse Theatre's production of 'Arsenic and Old Lace'.

Michael is married to actress Sharon Baylis and they live in Balham with their two dogs.
