“DON'T LISTEN, LADIES!”

by Sacha Guitry

adapted by Stephen Powys & Guy Bolton

One night Daniel Bachelet's second wife Madeleine, doesn't return home. Next morning she tells him she spent the night stuck in the Big Wheel in 'Luna Park', Paris. Naturally he doesn't believe her and insists upon a divorce. She in turn accuses him of not being honest with her – what about the passionate letter she found in an old bureau? To explain this Daniel calls in his first wife, Valentine, who is willing to tell Madeleine that it referred to a long closed incident. As the price of her interference Valentine moves in and installs herself once more in Daniel's house. Daniel finds the discomfort of having two wives even worse than the discomfort of not having any!

Appearing in this very delightful, very French comedy are ELIZABETH ADDYMAN as a delicious Lady with a Past, MICHAEL COTTERILL as Daniel, JENNY OULTON as Madeleine, LINDA RENWICK as Valentine, and MARTIN BRADLEY as a Baron. The cast also includes JOHN HUGHES and the play is directed by LESLIE LAWTON.
